There Were Four Cases of Small-Pox in Nagle's House.

He Set med to Fear the Lancet and Dodged the Physicians.

Mayor Gilroy went to his office in the City Hall with a touch-me-not sort of an expression on his face this morning. The Mayor had a most tender regard for his left arm, which he had vaccinated ast night. Mayor Gilroy lost no tim in having his arm scraped after he heard that John H. Nogle, his stock and bond clerk, had the small-pay. Dr. Cyrus Edson informed the Mayor by telephone of Nagle's removal to North Brother Island from his home, 158 East One Hundred and Fifteenth street, and advised Mr.

"I took no chances," said the Mayor my physician and had my whole family inoculated with the disense-preventing virus. My wife and children submitted to the operation without a murmur."

That is more than the big children did here in the Mayor's office," broke in Private Secretary Willis Holly, "'Who is first? they timidly exclaimed here when the doctor from the Health Department took out his scraper yesterday afternoon to vaccinate us. Every politician who went into the Hail was corrailed and lured into the vaccination with me' by Col. McCleilan. Under-Sheriff W. H. McDonough and Second Mayor's Marshall Daniel M. Donegan were among the victims. Chief Clerk Blake, of the Board of Aldermen, escaped the needle.

All person who came in contact with Nagle were vaccinated, and the room in which he sat, his desk and the Mayor's office, which he had occasion to visit frequently each day, were thoroughly fumigated last evening. As a matter of precaution, the reporters' room was fumigated this morning by Martin Keese, keeper of the City Hail, because the reporters are in and out of the Mayor's office a dozen times a day each, and they often met Nagle and spoke to him. Dr. Doty, of the Health Department, made a statement on Nagle's case this morning.

On April 9, said he, a family of four persons named Sherman, who lived in the same house with Nagie, became ill with small-pox, and were removed to North Brother Island. Every one in the house, except Nagie, who eluded the inspectors, was vaccirated.
He did not show any symptoms of the disease until Wednesday last, when he complained of a headache. On Tuesday night he had been to the theatre. He remained at home Wednesday, and again managed to evade the vaccinators. The inspectors went to the Mayor's office Thursday, to compel him to submit to vaccination.

A blotch showed on the face yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Nagle was then removed to the Reception Hospital, foot East Sixteenth street, for observation. Two more blotches showed at 5 o'clock, and Nagle was then removed to North Brother Island, where he now is.

ompleted at 1 o'clock this morning. The raid was brought about by death of a woman at 55 Withers street, told in yesterday's "Evening World." 't was feared that other persons living in the vicinity had contracted the disease and Commissioner Emery, to reduce the chances of an epidemic in that locality ordered his assistants to search all houses in the neighborhood for concealed case and to vaccinate the inmates. Fifty-two doctors and 132 policemen were assigned to the work. They started out from Humboldt street station at 9 o'clock last night.

The district covered twelve square locks, bounded by Union avenue, Rich street. There was great excitement when the police arrived. The locality is thickly populated, and fully 90 per cent. of the residents are Italians. Tall tene-ments rise up on both sides of the streets and there are many houses in the rear.

In the first house the doctors visited the inmates peremptorily refused to be vaccinated. The physicians called several policemen to assist them. When the Italians realized that the officials would stand no nonsense they submitted, and the vaccinating proceeded without any trouble until the doctors arrived at a house on Withers street, close to the house in which the woman died. As they were going upstairs three Italians, who were slightly intoxicated, jumper out of the second-story to a shed an slid over a fence. Several policemelpursuad them and ordered them to surrender The fugitives refused, and the policemen drew their revolvers and fired several shots in the air to frighten them but the men got year.

The doctors failed to discover any concolled cases of small-por. It was said the inmates peremptorily refused to be
